A wide-angle photograph of the interior of the War Memorial Opera House in San Francisco. The view is from the back of the auditorium, looking towards the stage. The theater features three tiers of seating, all upholstered in vibrant red fabric. The walls are a light cream color, adorned with ornate architectural details and decorative moldings. A large, circular balcony with a decorative railing encircles the upper tiers. The ceiling is a deep blue, and a massive, starburst-shaped chandelier hangs from the center. The stage area at the bottom is partially visible, showing red seating and some equipment.

The image captures the interior of the Margravial Opera House in Bayreuth, Germany. The view is from the audience's perspective, looking towards the stage. The most striking feature is the ceiling, which is a masterpiece of Baroque stucco work, featuring a large central fresco of a celestial scene surrounded by intricate scrollwork and smaller painted medallions. The walls are covered in wood paneling and are adorned with numerous balconies, each with ornate wooden railings and gilded decorative elements. The stage area is highly decorated, with a large, ornate proscenium arch and a central balcony. The audience seating consists of rows of blue upholstered chairs, and the floor is made of polished wood. The overall atmosphere is one of grandeur and historical elegance.

A wide-angle photograph of the interior of the Oslo Opera House. The view is from the audience's perspective, looking towards the stage. The seating consists of numerous rows of red upholstered seats, arranged in a semi-circular fashion. The walls and balconies are finished with light-colored wood paneling. A large, circular skylight with a grid of horizontal slats is positioned at the top of the dome, allowing natural light to enter. The stage area is visible in the distance, with various lighting fixtures and equipment hanging from the ceiling. The overall atmosphere is one of grandeur and modern architectural design.
